The book is written by two experts in the field of active shooter preparedness: Greg Crane, a former SWAT officer and security consultant, and John Curnow, a former FBI agent and hostage negotiator. Crane and Curnow have combined their decades of experience to create a book that is both informative and practical.

Facing the Active Shooter covers a wide range of topics, including:

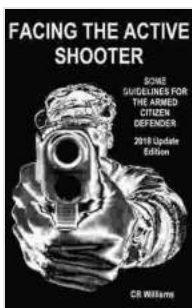

- How to identify the signs of an active shooter event
- What to do if you are confronted by an active shooter
- How to escape from an active shooter event
- How to provide first aid to victims of an active shooter event
- How to talk to your children about active shooter events

The book also includes case studies and expert advice from law enforcement and security professionals. These case studies provide real-world examples of how people have survived active shooter events, and the expert advice provides valuable insights into the best practices for active shooter preparedness.

Facing the Active Shooter is a must-read for anyone who wants to be prepared for an active shooter event. The book provides clear and concise instructions on what to do before, during, and after an active shooter event, and it is packed with valuable information from experts in the field.
