The History of the Woman Suffrage Statue

The Woman Suffrage Statue was created by sculptor Adelaide Johnson in 1921. Johnson was a prominent sculptor, and she was a strong supporter of the women's suffrage movement. She created the statue as a way to commemorate the women who had fought for the right to vote.

The statue was dedicated in Central Park in 1921. It was the first statue in the park to depict women, and it was a controversial addition at the time. Some people objected to the statue because they believed that women should not be depicted in public art. However, the statue quickly became a popular landmark, and it is now one of the most iconic statues in Central Park.
